This is the first time a conference with such a wide-ranging theme on ageing is held in Cyprus. The health of older people is a crucial subject which involves a multidisciplinary approach in order to offer effective treatments against age-related diseases. The conference is compact, comprehensive and practical, involving both basic science and clinical therapies. Lectures, presentations and seminars will be delivered by world-class academics, and by clinicians of European prestige. It will be attended by scientists working in the biology of ageing both from Cyprus and from Europe/Middle East, as well as clinicians, nurses, carers, health professionals and others with interest in applied, effective interventions which may help reduce the impact of ageing on society. We expect wide media coverage as well as publicity reaching beyond Cyprus in countries such as Russia, Israel, Middle East as well as the mainland Europe.
